Policewomen

The city commissioners have no mistake in appointing two women to full time on Edmonton's police force.
Policewomen have functioned usefully and successfully for a number of the larger forces in Canada for years. In London, England, their work has been regarded as invaluable for a very long time.
The appointment of women to police work serves the valuable purpose of recalling the original function and purpose of police officers.
The first police officers were not burly individuals chosen for their strength to enforce the law by brute physical power. They were leaders in the community whose personal prestige was so high that their deterred wrongdoers by the force of their own example.
This was the original theory of police work. And it is not a bad idea to get back to it now and then.

Delivering the Goods

Last year Canada exported goods to the total value of $2,850,000,000. The bulk of course consisted of war supplies—food, planes, tanks, guns, shells, ships, motorized vehicles and other equipment needed by our own and our allies. The bulk of this year's exports will be for the same purpose. Every fighting front, and to every one of the United Nations.
The total is upwards of 50 per cent more than that for 1941. It is twice and a half times greater than the figure for 1939. For December the shipments amounted to $277,000,000, a daily average of $2,800,000 monthly records—and striking a pace of $3,252,000,000 an year.
This is an achievement in which Canadians may rightly take pride. It is a demonstration of the nation's capacity to produce and as a contribution to the material strength of the Allies. That is the export quickly and in large quantities. The year indicates that the production peak was not reached in 1942 and that an even better showing is likely to be made in 1943.
It is scarcely possible that imports balance this huge volume of exports, and for a good part of the shipments to Britain there is no interest in the goods. This again is something in which we may well find satisfaction. Canada is not doing out supplies to the Allies on a cash-down promise-to-pay basis. The goods are going where they are needed and because they are needed. If the accounts do not balance, they just do balance.

Timely Philanthropy

The gift of $100,000 for the erection of a community building illustrates one benign public use to which private wealth may be put.
The Sicks, including son Emil, have been closely identified with the business life of the West for a good many years. The association has been a family tradition. And the Sicks family has expressed its appreciation of the friendly relations in the case of Lethbridge, by a splendid gift of timely money.
This $100,000 will erect a building which will form a part of Lethbridge's civic centre, something that will benefit Lethbridge citizens for years to come. With the current space congestion, this is the most timely moment for such a gift as Edmonton will be able to give.
Mr. Sicks' $100,000 would have erected here a splendid Farmers' Centre, adjacent to the market, a place where agricultural workers to the city could leave their children, hold meetings and make their headquarters while they shopped in Edmonton stores.
That sum would have erected a magnificent permanent building for the unfortunate Wings Club, now without a home. It would have established a splendid recreation centre for members of the armed forces or a much needed hostel for the women of Army, Navy and Air Forces.
Edmonton would have benefited Lethbridge her benefactor. But there are a dozen ways in which such a benefaction would be invaluable to Edmonton. Edmonton could wish, too, that some wealthy benefactor would glance our way.

An Army at Stake

The fight for Rostov has developed into a three-way battle to decide the fate of the Axis forces and south of the Don, estimated to number a half-million to a million men. Stalingrad is no longer a prize at stake. The Nazi drive through Kalmyk toward the Caucasus has been slowed by the news. The spearhead thrusts toward the Caucasus oil fields are events of the past.
The question now is whether Hitler can extricate his troops from those areas, or will have to write off the entire southern wing of his army in Russia as a total loss. From the north, the Russian army is rushing to battle its way down the Moscow-Rostov railway. From the east another army is advancing along both sides of the Don. From the south the Red army in the Caucasus is battling the enemy northward toward the narrowing gap at the tip of the sea of Azov. The Russian army is converging forces can reach Rostov the gap will be closed, and the doom of the enemy caught in the trap will be sealed.
That the Russian advances have been slowed by stiffer resistance is evident. They are not making the progress of ten

A Summary of a Broadcast Delivered Over CFRN January 16

By HAROLD L. WEIR

Most dramatic incident in the news this week, was the revelation of the various monstrosities that have boiled out in the French political pot in North Africa.

That same propensity for cheap intrigue and venal plotting has corrupted the French political scene for the war and made it impossible to face the stern realities of the future. The French working over the French overseas.

The assassination of Admiral Darlan, prompted by the invasion of some of the political intrigues.

Other shares are Harold L. Weir, the desperate questing for authority and the political rivals, constant obstruction in military and civil affairs and the political intrigues.

The name of the Count of Paris, the son of the late King of France, intrudes itself in the news, time and time again in a most revealing manner.

The Count of Paris is said to be in North Africa, although nobody seems to know where he is. It is no doubt, however, that some sort of a royalist plot has been hatching.

ler's office. If we carefully peruse these inquiries, we find that Military defeatism has already been announced as treason. Social reaction is quick as a flash. It is in becoming apparent that the forces of reaction are already lined up solidly against social justice and social security.

Rumor Clinic

The Rumor: That women will be conscripted for war work in Canada.
The Fact: The National Selective Service, Ottawa, says: "There is no thought of conscripting women for war work in Canada. The way will be smoothed for women to go voluntarily into war work."

The Rumor: That the government has ordered fifty thousand pairs of skis of inferior quality—presumably to be used by our troops for the invasion of some northern country.
The Fact: The Department of Munitions and Supply reports that no order has been placed since the beginning of the war for such thousands of pairs of skis. Total purchases fall far short of this number. The quality of the skis is not to be disclosed. The skis are purchased by the Department of Munitions and Supply, and must conform to a sealed specification issued by the Department of National Defence. All skis purchased by the Department of Munitions and Supply are of the highest quality.

Maxine Brower Lt. Robertson Pledge Vows

Wesley United church, bright with flowers and garlands, was the scene on Saturday evening of the wedding of Maxine Hazel, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Brower of this city, and Lt. Robert Henry Robertson of the Edmonton Fusiliers, only son of Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Robertson also of Edmonton. The Rev. V. T. Young officiated.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a formal gown of white, chivalric tulle, fashioned with sweetheart neckline, long wrist-length sleeves, fitted bodice and full skirt. Her veil of tulle to length fell from a dainty tiara. Bridesmaids in May Queen of Scots style and her only piece of jewelry was a single strand of pearls gift of the bridegroom. American beauty roses in a bridal bouquet completed her ensemble.

Miss Doris Brower was her bridesmaid. She wore a four-length gown fashioned with muted bodice of chivalric tulle and gathered skirt of tulle. Bracelet length sleeves and round neck line were other features of her ensemble. Her hat was a halo model of chivalric tulle and she carried bouquet of mixed spring flowers.

A brilliant pendant, gift of the bride was her only piece of jewelry. Norman McElroy was best man, and the groom's attendant was Miss Lorraine Mylne. Deane (above), eldest daughter of J. M. Deane, M.P. for Athabasca, and Mrs. Deane, and Constable Sylvester Ryan, R.C.M.P. (right), youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. James Ryan of Athabasca, were married Saturday. The Rev. Father A. O'Neill, curate of the parish of Our Lady of Perpetual Help, officiated. The newlyweds will spend their honeymoon at Montreal and in the Laurentians, later taking up residence in Ottawa.

Strike to Regain Lands Conquered by Japs

United Nations Taking Offensive on Pacific Front

They build for tomorrow, even on the field of battle. The Germans burned a school in this village in the Moshalek area when they captured it, and the very Russian soldiers, bottom, who drove them out a few weeks later promptly saved logs and rebuilt the school before the smoke of battle had cleared. At top a Russian family is shown settling down at "home" after the Nazis were driven out of their village.

They'll Bomb the Jap Again

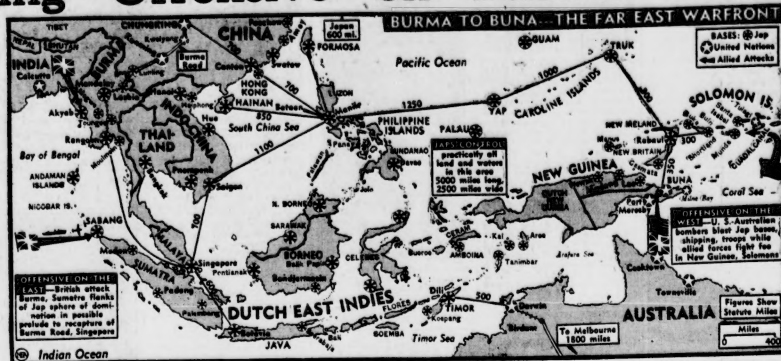

Three United States flyers, their plane shot down in a flight over the Solomon Islands, are rescued from their rubber raft by the boat at left. Two of the airmen swim for life preservers, while the third clings to the life raft.

President Tells Congress "We'll Strike Hard"

President Roosevelt is pictured here as he delivered his war message to the first joint session of the 76th Congress, in which he stated that the United Nations would "strike—and strike hard" in Europe, and that 1943 carried promise of a "very substantial advance along the road . . . to Berlin and Rome and Tokyo." Seated at the President's left is Maj. Geo. Edwin Watson, his military aide.

From the jungled mountains of Burma to the beaches of New Guinea and the Solomons, the United Nations are on the offense—striking to regain the scores of countries and islands of the Far East now in the hands of the Jap. This 5,000-mile warfront probably will see many decisive actions in coming months as the names that made history in 1942 again come into the fighting news.

Clip-Out Cutie of the Week

Here's a honey for our fighting men to clip out and pin up on barracks walls, tent flaps and locker doors. Technical data: she's Dorothy Kolbe of Los Angeles, wearing a sample of what we'll be seeing on the beaches in 1943.

Close—But It Missed

A moment before this picture was taken, a Stuka dive-bomber had been roaring in for a low level attack on a British warship. But skillful handling averted disaster by swinging the vessel hard over to miss the bomb. While spray and fragments rise close by, the gun crew is shown still hammering with its multiple pom-pom at the enemy plane.

Reds in White

Clad in white suits that blend into the snow-blanketed terrain, a Russian machine gun crew and an automatic rifeman keep a section of a railway line under fire as their comrades encircle the Germans. Photo was taken on the central front.

LAST HUNDRED MILES TO TRIPOLI

The last hundred miles may prove the hardest in Britain's three-month pursuit of Rommel's Axis army as the desert fox makes a stand in the wadi region east of Tripoli. The wadi—dry river beds or gullies—form natural defenses against armored attacks on the last Axis stronghold in Libya.

THESE ARE THE ARMY HOTELS

Private rooms and telephones? No, Mr. Jones, not even in these U.S. Army hotels. Room service is out in these glorified barracks, but troops will probably use the swimming pools, tennis courts and dance halls for exercise, drilling and entertainment. The United States government bought these three and six others, and has leased some 475 hotels for housing and hospitalization of soldiers. Stevens, with 3,000 rooms, is world's largest hotel. El Mirador and Nautilus are hospitals for wounded who have served their country.

Daily War Map—Exclusively in The Edmonton Bulletin

The map above illustrates the whole western theatre of war and indicates the progress being made on all the fighting fronts, besides locating the position of recent major developments. (1) Germans admit Soviet troops gain bridgehead on Neva River. (2) Russian forces closer to Latvian border. (3) Russians launch new offensive aimed at Riga. (4) Germans acknowledge new Soviet advances. (5) Russian Caucasian armies advance 50 miles. (6) Germans admit powerful Russian attacks. (7) Liaison established between Fighting French and Giraud French. (8) French record slight gains. (9) Royal Navy has conveyed 1,400 ships from Gibraltar to African ports. (10) American aircraft attack Lille. (11) R.A.F. maintains continuous night offensive on Ruhr.

Richard Crooks, William Primrose
In Resounding Concert Triumph

Two great artists, excellently in their own chosen fields, and representing two of the foremost cultural organizations in the world, namely, Richard Crooks, leader of the Metropolitan Opera Association, and William Primrose, first violinist of the New Symphony orchestra, pooled their talents Saturday night at the Empire theatre to give this city the first of the finest concerts in its history.

The concert was the fourth in the current season's Celebrity Series sponsored by the Women's Musical Club.

Throughout there was a high degree of excellence in the singing of Mr. Crooks, and virtuosity in the playing of Mr. Primrose. They made their individual contributions to the program, and also combined in several numbers. In both they revealed infinite talent, winning personalities and generous natures and were a triumph and a joy down in musical history as yet standing.

Mr. Crooks has sung here before and undoubtedly is the most popular singer with Edmonton audiences. Magnificent as were his previous concerts, he topped them on Saturday.

The theatre was packed, there being nearly 1,800 persons crowded into every regular seat, with many seats in the orchestra pit, on the stage and at every other possible point and corner. With such a large audience, geared to the peak of enthusiasm, Mr. Crooks reached his heights.

COMPILING PERFORMANCE
Proof of his compelling performance, and the profundity of his artistry and vocal appeal, came at the first number of the scheduled program, Sir Edward Elgar's impressive "Land of Hope and Glory." Mr. Crooks had hardly begun when members of the audience, almost as one, rose and stood throughout the song as an earnest which, obviously, was as impressive to the great artist as it was to the bystander.

Audiences rise to their feet rarely, it takes Richard Crooks to pull them up for other numbers, for which rising is not customary.

In all the annals of concert-giving, in this city, it is doubtful if there have been performances in equal degree given by Mr. Crooks, of the "Hallelujah Chorus," "The Messiah" and "Alma Mater" from "Fidelio" and Mendelssohn's "If With All Your Hearts" from "The Elijah."

TWO FAVORITES
Comfort "You My People" and "If With All Your Hearts" are two favorites favored by listeners. Both songs, sung by the two artists, and other soloists have been heard in many times. Also, all too often they are sung in the same way, and the trained musical instruments may sing, almost as if without any melody, and not as fervid interpreters.

But how different were the artists as sung by Mr. Crooks. Inward with the atmosphere of the orchestra and church music since his days as a soloist. Mr. Crooks sang them not in cold blood, simply reciting the notes, but with passionate emotion and reflection, and the snarls of infernal fire which kindled to supernatural rapture, the words of the mighty composer. Mr. Crooks stood there, thoroughly in the spirit of the music, his heart brimful of passion, and pouring out glorious song with all his might.

To hear him sing with words, one can appreciate them at their full worth. They are not dry, dull numbers. They are so only when sung by a mediocre interpreter, a singer such as Richard Crooks who can reveal them in all their enduring beauty.

OPERA GROUP
Mr. Crooks gave considerable attention to opera. His first contribution in this form was the aria "Come un bel dì di Maggio" from "Giulio Cesare" by George Frideric Handel, sung with surprising beauty. The words of the song were so well chosen that he returned and sang the same aria, "The Dream" from "Maurice Strakos" and before the audience would let him rest, he came back again and sang the aria "You Fair-

Getting Around

Mr. Lagrima from Donizetti's "Elisio de Love."

Other numbers included Dariusz "Daria Daria, Fantasia," "Fidelio" by Felix Mendelssohn, "Chevalier Cosaque," Leon's "Coutin d'or," and Mendelssohn's "On Wings of Song."

Mr. Primrose, making his first appearance here, scored a great triumph. As first violinist of the New Symphony Orchestra, he has led the viola section of that great orchestra, and under most of the world's leading conductors.

As a viola soloist he stands unsurpassed in his field, and his playing at the best was apparent in his performance.

MAESTRO ACTIVELY
Tonally and technically, and viewed from the standpoint of musicianship, and of interpretive polish, his performance should not be considered as a masterpiece achievement. He gave a convincing demonstration of unusual analytical insight throughout his program, his executive faculty showed why he leads the viola section in a front rank symphony orchestra, and ranks as the No. 1 man in this instrument.

He played "Ave Maria" and Nardella's "Concerto" in F Minor on his first appearance. There was nothing dry or pedantic in either of these veteran works. He brought out a wealth of light and shade and variety of music, that testified to his consummate musicianship.

As an encore he added Tchaikovsky's "No. 10. But the Lonely Heart."

His second program included Kreisler's arrangement of the "Largo" from Dvorak's "The New World Symphony," "Hallelujah Chorus," and "The Messiah" by Handel, arranged by Jascha Heifetz.

Mr. Crooks, as a soloist, was arranged by Heifetz, and Paganini's "Caprice No. 24." To all Mr. Primrose brought pronounced wealth of expression, and registered an easy conquest of their exactions. Every note was well modulated, and there was an invariable likeness of tone, as an encore he played "The Lullaby."

JOINT APPEARANCES

use Kikua as a rat trap and keep knocking off Japanese vessels and ships on arrival. The Japs only keep Kikua to save face and they are getting a lot of whacks in the face and everywhere else in doing so.

Something like that of extreme interest is the contention the Japs are making in the Aleutians to save face. It may well be that this peculiar claim to save face is a national integrity complex, will contribute to victory measure to the final victory of the United Nations over Japs.

There is still something to be said for the old rhyme about "He who fights and runs away will live to fight another day." Hereinafter to the point of utter annihilation is certainly not a good military strategy under certain conditions.

The holding of a position long after the cost of such defense is played off all proportion to the defense is hard strategy. And of late it is starting to look as if the Japs may be playing the same kind of a card, face-saving game in the Solo.

At least it would seem from published accounts of the fighting in that area that the price paid in warships, transports, planes and tanks for the small price of reinforcements landed by the Japs is out of all proportions to the results.

So perhaps face-saving will turn out to be just another slipknot on the side of the United Nations. Several numbers appeared together for several encores.

Just before the intermission they played the "Berceuse" from Benjamin Godard's opera "Joelina" and Schubert's "Ave Maria," and at the end of the concert they combined in Schubert's "Serenade" and Massenet's "Elixir." The fusion of the two from rank artists in these numbers was for them one of the greatest displays of enthusiasm ever seen and heard here. Both appeared well pleased and smiled and bowed their appreciation.

Frederick Schaefer, who had been proved as a soloist in the past, that he is an efficient, helpful accompanist and several times he was called on by the artists to share the applause.

All three took part in the performance of "God Save the King" with the audience singing—O.

In Assault on Nazi Capital

LONDON, Jan. 11.—(CP)—Many Canadians attached to Lancaster bomber squadrons were with the attacking force that swarmed over Berlin Saturday night to send block-busting high explosives and thousands of incendiary bombs crashing into the German capital. No R.C.A.F. aircraft took part in the raid, however.

Like the returning British air force, the Canadians expected surprise at the lightness of resistance offered by the Nazis during the long trip from Britain.

"Niel and Colquhoun were a lot worse," said WO John Patterson of Robygeon Osh, a 25-year-old navigator. "We have never taken so long over our bombing mission as we did Saturday night. The flak wasn't bad and we saw only one searchlight."

PRaised BY SKIPPER
Patterson, a school teacher in peacetime, was praised highly by his skipper, an English aviator, for the manner in which he found the target despite heavy clouds.

"He took us straight over the target without getting a pinpoint on route and we arrived dead on," the aviator said. "It was so thick all the way that you couldn't see anything to pinpoint on. It was amazing."

Four long strings of incendiaries were seen burning near the marshalling yards in the northern part of Berlin by Flt. Spt. Jack McAvoy of Aerod, Sask., who said how his bomber was attacked by three night fighters over the target area.

After the bombs were released the fighters jumped on the tail of the Lancaster and the big bomber was forced into a 4,000-foot dive to escape them, said McAvoy, a navigator. The fighters pursued the Lancaster as it turned for home and the pilot was forced to low 3,000 feet before shaking them off for good.

BOMB IN FORMATION
The defenses weren't as stiff as we had expected," McAvoy continued. "Our boys were right on target. We passed any number of Lancasters going into the target as we were coming away. We went in ourselves with four others in V formation. It wasn't planned, of course. We just went in close together and hard on purpose to form a wall to our own kind. I believe we were still in formation when we bombed."

"We were lucky to see the target as it was thick all the way over," McAvoy said. "I thought it was going to be a disappointing trip but over Berlin the clouds cleared right up for us. I saw the marshalling yards and four long strings of incendiaries in and about the target."

The raid started to take a good hold, but we were there early," said Canadian crew member, Lieutenant Sergeant Art Staves of Winnipeg, M. Fleming of Drunk, who said his bomber was hit by a Jap, face-saving game in the Solo.

At least it would seem from published accounts of the fighting in that area that the price paid in warships, transports, planes and tanks for the small price of reinforcements landed by the Japs is out of all proportions to the results.

So perhaps face-saving will turn out to be just another slipknot on the side of the United Nations. Several numbers appeared together for several encores.

Just before the intermission they played the "Berceuse" from Benjamin Godard's opera "Joelina" and Schubert's "Ave Maria," and at the end of the concert they combined in Schubert's "Serenade" and Massenet's "Elixir." The fusion of the two from rank artists in these numbers was for them one of the greatest displays of enthusiasm ever seen and heard here. Both appeared well pleased and smiled and bowed their appreciation.

Frederick Schaefer, who had been proved as a soloist in the past, that he is an efficient, helpful accompanist and several times he was called on by the artists to share the applause.

All three took part in the performance of "God Save the King" with the audience singing—O.
